

THE YELLOW FEVER.

The Terrible Epidemic Raging in Portions of Brazil.

HUNDREDS ARE DYING IN SANTOS

And are Huddled Away as Soon as Dead—Rio Janeiro Saved From the Pestilence by Good Drainage—A River Full of Death.

New York, Jan. 3.—Reports from Brazil say that yellow fever and smallpox are raging at Santos with almost unprecedented fury, and the summer season has only just begun. As an indication of the fearful prevalence of the diseases it is said that eighteen captains of merchant vessels have been stricken down and have died within the past two months. They constitute but a small fraction of the many victims. On some vessels the entire ship's company, officers and men, have been swept away by the diseases. Of all the persons attacked it is estimated that only about one-third have left their beds alive.

At the offices of the different companies in this city engaged in the Brazilian trade it was said to-day that nearly every mail brings the announcement of one or more deaths from the ships in port at Santos. On board the ships which have lately returned from Brazil the situation at Santos was pitiful indeed. The captains of the different vessels all give much the same account.

HOW SAVED BY GOOD DRAINAGE.

The yellow fever and smallpox, they say, have also broken out at Rio Janeiro, but to nothing like the same extent as at Santos. At Rio Janeiro an European company has recently reconstructed the drainage system, while at Santos the drainage system is in a more frightful condition than ever. To make matters worse at Santos, the means of transportation have become clogged, and vessels are arriving in the port are obliged to wait weeks and months for wharriage and dock room. The whole harbor is crowded with such vessels lying idle in the pestilential waters.

SANTOS IS ABOUT 120 MILES SOUTH OF RIO JANEIRO.

It lies on the inner side of the island of Santos, which extends within a short distance of the coast. The province of St. Paul stretches along the opposite coast, and the greater part of the merchandise landed at Santos is transported to the city of St. Paul, which lies inland about three hours' ride by rail. The merchandise brought to Santos is exchanged for coffee, which is about the only export from the neighboring country.

A RIVER FULL OF DEATH.

It is among the ships and along the water front that the black vomit and smallpox have done their most deadly work. The drainage of the port empties into the river close to the railway wharf, which is the place where the larger vessels go to unload. Of the many vessels that have been at this wharf to unload in the last two months, the Chaucer, of the Liverpool, Brazil and River Plate Steam Navigation Company, is said to be the only one that did not give up some of the crew to the pestilences.

The water in front of the port and along the river where the vessels are anchored is described as black and foul. It is filled with animal and vegetable growths, plainly visible to the eye, the captains say, if a glass of it is held to the light. The bottom of the river is black, bad smelling mud. When the tide goes down great stretches of this black in the sun. Near some of the wharves the water is not deep enough for ships and the unloading is carried on across scows. At low water many of these are left buried in the soft mud. The men working on them are said to furnish a large number of the fever victims. A stone quay is now building on the water front, and dredges and scows are incessantly at work spreading the contagion that the mud is supposed to contain.

HUSTLED AWAY AS SOON AS DEAD.

The number of those stricken down is so great that only a part of them can be accommodated at the hospital. Temporary quarters have been fitted up as well as circumstances would allow, and as fast as the hospital is filled the extra victims are distributed among the other places. In most cases those stricken down live at the longest only a few days. Sometimes they are dead in a few hours. As soon as certain symptoms appear the physicians are able to calculate the time when death will probably occur, and the family or friends of the dying man to notified to have all arrangements for the burial ready at that time. No delay is permitted. If the family or friends do not come forward the city takes charge of the burial.

The usual time for yellow fever to be at its worst has only just begun. From January to March is the summer season in Santos latitude, and it is in the hottest weather that the disease works the most damage. A new hospital is being built, and at last reports work on it was being pushed night and day.

FRED DOUGLASS'S MAGNANIMITY

The Story About His Proclaiming a Position For His Old Master's Daughter—An Interesting Reminiscence.

Sir—I find a paragraph concerning a recent magnanimous action of Fred Douglass going the rounds of the papers, and the most essential statement in it, and the one which does Mr. Douglass the greatest credit, is true. I have it from my daughter, who also employed in the agricultural department, and I know that it is true, that Douglass procured an appointment for the daughter of the man who owned him as a slave. But it is an error that Mr. Douglass was disposed of at auction. He ran away, and after earning the money himself bought himself and paid his old master his price. This I had from his own lips, and I am glad to know that he is still living and will see this statement and correct it if my memory is at fault. He and I stumped for Garfield twelve years ago, and were together for weeks in 1880, and he told me the whole story of his life. It would be impossible for anyone to hear that story from his eloquent lips and ever forget a single detail.

Never shall I forget how his story of his last meeting with his master impressed me. It thrilled me with all the solemn and pathetic interest that attaches to the stories of the martyrs and saints of old. It would make a fit subject for a painting by a Raphael. Some fifteen years ago his old master lay dying and dispatched Douglass to come and see him. He could not die in peace until he had seen his old slave. With that kind and forgiving spirit which always characterized Frederick Douglass, he hastened to the bedside of his old slave-owner. He said he had no thought but that the old wretch had sent for him to ask his pardon for the cruel wrong he had done him by depriving him of his liberty and forcing him to flee to Canada and England, and pay the price—the market price of himself. But no; he was mistaken. No such thought had ever entered the old wretch's head. The moment he reached the bedside of the dying man and was recognized the old fellow, full of the old pride, gasped:

"Frederick, I have sent for you to tell you before I die that I have forgiven you for running away from me." Douglass said it was so ludicrous and exasperating that he was compelled to laugh in the face of the dying man, but was forced to say:

"Thank you; I do not want your pardon. I paid the hard cash for it and got your receipt in writing long ago. So good day, good day, sir, and now you may go and settle it with your God. I neither ask nor can I accept your pardon. You have mine, so farewell forever." And he rose and left the room, and never saw him again.

As he left one of the old man's daughters who was also very sick and expecting to die, summoned Mr. Douglass to her bedside. He went kindly and sat down by her, and took her thin hands in his strong friendly grasp. "O, Mr. Douglass, I am going to die," murmured the lady, "and I was so young when my mother died I cannot remember what she looked like, and I beg you to describe her to me so that I shall recognize her in Heaven."

"I remember her well," said Mr. Douglass, "and described the personal appearance of my old mistress as well as I could, and to the perfect satisfaction of the dying maiden."

"Her interest was rapturous and wonderful as I proceeded to tell her all I could remember of her sainted mother, for whose memory I still have almost a filial reverence."

"I told her that her mother had early impressed me that she was my friend, for when the other slaves who were older imposed upon me, fostered me or abused me she would always protect me."

Soon after the old slave-owner and his daughter died. And now another daughter of that hard-hearted old wretch is made to feel the wonderful love and reverence that Mr. Douglass still cherishes for the memory of the dear old mistress who defended him when he was a child. And such is the secret of all this matter.

Science in Bread Making.

At the recent annual meeting of the American Chemical Society, held in Washington, D. C., the question of the value of carbonate of ammonia as a leavening agent in bread, or as used in baking powders, came up for discussion, in which Prof. Barker, of the University of Pennsylvania, and president of the society; Dr. Richardson, late of the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington; Dr. William McMurtrie, late professor of chemistry in the University of Illinois; Dr. E. H. Bartley, late chemist of the Brooklyn, N. Y., Board of Health, and professor of chemistry of the Long Island College, and others, took part.

The consensus of opinion was overwhelming in favor of the employment of ammonia. It was stated as a fact that ammonia rendered the gluten of the flour more soluble than the original gluten, and that the bread in which this action was produced by carbonate of ammonia must be more digestible and hence more healthful, and because of the extreme volatility of carbonate of ammonia and its complete expulsion from the bread in the process of baking, it is one of the most useful, most healthful and most valuable leavening agents known.

These conclusions are borne out by the very elaborate and exhaustive experiments made by Prof. J. W. Mallet, of the University of Virginia, which show conclusively that bread made with a baking powder in which one per cent of carbonate of ammonia is used, in connection with cream of tartar and soda, is not only of uniformly better color and texture, but a product more wholesome, because the ammonia serves to neutralize any organic or lactic acids present in the flour.

THE PRIEST INTERFERED.

A New Year's Dance in New Jersey Not Allowed to Proceed.

BRICK CHURCH, N. J., Jan. 3.—The Young Men's Catholic Union, of Orange Valley, held an anniversary reception in Temperance Hall, Thursday night. Many friends of the union were present, and the music furnished and the supply of refreshments were the best to be had. At 12 o'clock as the dancers, against the wishes of Rev. William M. R. Callan, pastor of Our Lady of the Valley Church, began to wait the old year out, Father Callan put in an appearance and detected the young people in the enjoyment of a round dance. The church prohibits waltzing, and Father Callan never condones a breach of any rule. He showed his displeasure in a practical manner. The pastor astonished all hands by requesting them to leave the hall. He also had the lights extinguished, and in fifteen minutes after the priest entered not a single dancer was in sight. Father Callan refused to even allow the members of the union to serve the refreshments they had purchased to their friends. The priest informed the young people that they could enjoy their refreshments at their homes.

Kingwood Notes.

Special Correspondence of the Intelligencer. KINGWOOD, W. VA., Jan. 3.—The Good Templar's lodge gave a delightful entertainment on New Year's night to a large audience of invited guests. Music, dialogues, recitations, etc., were given in a highly creditable way.

The New Year's social dance at the Gordon hotel was largely attended. Many rich costumes adorned the beautiful women. Messrs. J. W. Heermans, J. M. Crane and Ed. C. Manonn were the musicians.

Kingwood is still on the boom. Many new houses are still going up, in spite of the disagreeable weather. We want some good industries here which will give employment to men. A woolen mill, handloom factory or something of that kind. There is a fine opening here for a laundry, furniture factory or a tannery.

"Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious summer" by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This wonderful medicine so invigorates the system and enriches the blood that cold weather becomes positively enjoyable. Arctic explorers would do well to make a note of this.

A Good Letter.

Persons troubled with colds or the grip will find some pointers in the following letter from a prominent Pennsylvania druggist:

BRADDOCK, Pa., October 26, 1891.

GENTLEMEN:—You will please ship me as soon as possible one gross Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Out of the sixty dozen you have shipped me in the last two years I have only one dozen and a half left. I think from the sales to date this fall that our sales this winter will be greater than ever. It gives me pleasure to say that out of the whole amount that I have sold and guaranteed I have not had one customer say that it did not give him the relief claimed for it.

Yours truly, AL. MAGGILL.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at Logan Drug Co.'s Drug Store; regular size, 50 cents and $1.
